

Instructions and How to Play:

In this game the player will employ and use all of the information that was gained throughout the course of exploration and learning on this website. It's finally the time where the player gets to build their own superhero that can survive the harsh space environment. The player will have a group of sentences, each one refers to an organism. There are three categories of sentences: animals, plants, and micro-organisms. The player will have to pick up three sentences from the animals' category, one from the plants', and one from the a micro organisms'. The answer for the first line from the animals category will be the head of the organism; meaning that if the sentence referred to a specific organism, the player will put this organism's head on the table and stick the rest of the organism's body according to the rest of the sentences. The second line picked will be the organism's body, and the third line is its lower part (legs, limbs, tails, wings(for the fly)). The line of the plant's category is, for the sake of fun, the hypothetical food that the organism will feed upon. The last line of the micro organisms category is an internal, or total, property of the organism. It will be stuck to the white circles on the organism's body (identified by the second line picked).
