

A drawing game for kids or kids and adults allows each person to build off of the previous person's drawings.

The drawing can be animals, microorganisms, or plants

how to play?

1. One person starts the drawing with something simple and quick on Their sheet paper.
2. Each player starts with a piece of paper and a drawing tool. Sit so that your drawing is somewhat hidden from the person, or people, you are playing with. The element of surprise at the end is half the fun!
3. Share your finished drawings with each other and try to guess the name of the organism

Reflection:

- What contribution that someone else made to the drawing do you enjoy most?
- How did you feel while creating the drawing?
- How do you hope other people will feel when they look at your picture?
- What would you tell someone else about this picture?
- If you could make this picture again, what would you do differently?
